

ORDER FORM FOR WARRING SOULS

“At its heart this is a sobering story of bitterness and the potential for violence when people of faith leave their minds at the doors of their holy places – be they churches, mosques, synagogues or temples.”

JUDITH M. BROWN: EMERITUS PROFESSOR,
UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD AND PRIEST IN THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND

“Warring Souls is not only entertaining, it will excite your thinking and take you out of any comfort zone!”

PADDY GLOVER: FORMER BISHOP OF THE ANGLICAN DIOCESE OF THE FREE STATE

“I think it is a brave novel!”

BEVERLEY HADDAD: ANGLICAN PRIEST
AND PROFESSOR AT THE UNIVERSITY OF KWAZULU-NATAL

ABOUT THE BOOK

WARRING SOULS shows what happens when religious faith is governed by ethical passion – and when it isn't. It is the story of conflict between 35-year old Sarah Williams, the radical Professor of Christian Ethics at the fictitious St Mark's College near George, and Dr Gerald Meyer, the recently-appointed and staunchly evangelical vice-chancellor, together with their supporters. The story takes place in the first semester of 2006.

The conflict includes a dramatic Easter event in the Swartberg mountains and reaches a tense climax at the end of a campus mission. Led by an eloquent missionary from Oxford, the mission is intended to bolster evangelical faith and indirectly counter Sarah's influence. Warring Souls includes flashbacks to her doctoral studies at Oxford and her sabbatical in Cambridge, Massachusetts. It carries a vital, ethical message for all believers.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

MARTIN PROZESKY is an independent ethics trainer, researcher and writer. He was formerly a professor in the fields of theology, comparative religion and applied ethics at the University of KwaZulu-Natal, and now holds honorary research appointments at both that university and the University of the Free State. He is the author of many academic papers and several books published internationally, and was made a Fellow of the former University of Natal 'in recognition of distinguished contributions to knowledge', in the words of the citation. Warring Souls is his first novel.
