

Symposium: Community Engagement: What are the possibilities at UKZN?

In the re-visioning of the institutions of higher education in post-apartheid South Africa, community engagement has been one of the three core functions of the institutions. However, in many universities this has been the least-developed of the three. In line with the new strategic direction of the University, critical engagement with communities has been foregrounded

In the Symposium speakers will explore the theoretical and historical roots of engaged scholarship and community engagement, explore current and past practices of community engagement at UKZN as well as by using a case study of the homestay project of medical students, what the possibilities for community engagement are going forward.
